

The Influence of International Law on Domestic Legal Systems

Adrian Jackson

Dr.

University of Helsinki
Yliopistonkatu 4, 00100 Helsinki, Finland

Kim Adams

Prof.

Trinity College Dublin
College Green, Dublin 2, Ireland

Jamie Miller

PhD

University of Lisbon
Alameda da Universidade, 1649-004 Lisboa, Portugal

Abstract. This article explores how international law influences domestic legal systems. It discusses the incorporation of international treaties into national legislation and the role of international courts in shaping domestic legal norms. The article provides case studies from various countries to illustrate the dynamic interaction between international and domestic law.

Keywords: International Law, Domestic Law, Legal Systems, International Courts, Treaties

Introduction

The intersection of international law and domestic legal systems is a complex and dynamic area of study, reflecting the growing interdependence of nations in the globalized world. This article examines how international law influences domestic legal systems, focusing on the incorporation of international treaties into national legislation and the role of international courts in shaping domestic legal norms. By presenting case studies from different countries, the article illustrates the diverse ways in which international law is integrated into domestic legal frameworks and the challenges involved in maintaining coherence between the two.

This is a preliminary version. To read the full version of the article, please purchase a subscription.

References

1. Velchev, A. Медии, политически комуникации и обществена съпричастност. In Новите реалности и политическата наука (pp. 177-184). Университет за национално и световно стопанство (УНСС).