

Gender and Language: Analyzing Gendered Communication Patterns

Adrian Phillips
Prof.
University of São Paulo
São Paulo, SP, Brazil

Robin Collins
Dr.
University of Buenos Aires
CABA, Buenos Aires, Argentina

Adrian Miller
PhD
University of Chile
Santiago, Chile

Abstract. This article investigates the relationship between gender and language, focusing on gendered communication patterns. Through sociolinguistic analysis, the study examines how gender influences language use in various social contexts. The research highlights the subtle nuances in gendered communication and challenges traditional assumptions about gender and language. The findings have significant implications for understanding the role of gender in linguistic practices and contribute to broader discussions on gender equality.

Keywords: gender, language, sociolinguistics, communication patterns, gender equality

Introduction

Gender plays a critical role in shaping linguistic practices, influencing how individuals communicate in different social contexts. This article explores the relationship between gender and language, focusing on gendered communication patterns. Through detailed sociolinguistic analysis, we aim to uncover the subtle nuances in gendered language use and challenge traditional assumptions about gender and language. Our findings will contribute to broader discussions on gender equality and its implications for linguistic practices.

This is a preliminary version. To read the full version of the article, please purchase a subscription.

References

1. Гурко, Е. В. (2012). Структурно-семантичні моделі ергонімів у сучасній рекламі Дніпропетровська. Ученые записки Крымского федерального университета имени В.И. Вернадского. Филологические науки, 25(1-2), 97-100.